Additional Benefits of being “Logged In”

- Some interest groups have “Group” pages with information.
- This information is typically available to Group Members only.
- Example is the “Human Conflict and it’s Impact” interest group.
- This group posts some of the member presentations and essays.
- Some groups have private group forums where “online” dialogue can take place.

Throughout the ages, humankind has engaged in conflict and wars that have shaped the course of history. From the building and dismantling of empires and nations through to the dissemination of strongly held ideologies, ordinary people have been caught up in extraordinary events – from leaders to despots; from generals to soldiers; and from those who aspire to power and greatness through to everyday citizens. Having previously looked at Canada's involvement in 20th century conflicts, the group continues to expand its interests – looking at conflict and its ramifications across the centuries and around the world.

Registration is limited to 18 participants.

Canadians on the Nile Part 1, By Gord Franson

Canadians on the Nile Part 2, By Gord Franson

An analysis of the 1978 book "Canadians on the Nile" by Roy MacLaren.

The book is an account of how men from one of the larger colonies Canada, helped to secure one of the lesser dependencies, the Sudan within the realm of Queen Victoria. It will show how rough, turbulent Canadian woodsmen joined with officers and gentlemen and the sometimes equally rough but always brave soldiers of Victoria's army in the most remarkable adventures of the latter half of her long reign.

Frank Pickersgill - An Unlikely Soldier, by Gordon Fairhead

Frank Pickersgill was a courageous young Canadian whose wartime activities led to his execution at Buchenwald as an Allied secret agent. His early life is portrayed as someone who had poor health and who always felt he lived in the shadow of his older brother, Jack. The rise of Nazism and the war in France drew Frank and a fellow Canadian, Ken Macalister, into joining the SOE. After grueling training, they went to France in June 1943 to help the resistance as they planned to link up with the spy network known as 'Physician'. Unfortunately, by that point the network had been compromised. Sadly, Frank and Ken, along with dozens of other SOE agents, were arrested, interrogated, beaten, and ultimately sent to a concentration camp. On Sept 9, 1944 Frank, Ken and 14 others were hung. The stories of Frank Pickersgill and Ken Macalister are well documented in a book by Jonathon Vance entitled Unlikely Soldiers.

The Seven Years War and its impact on native North America, by Henri Walhout.

A look at the events leading up to the beginning of the Seven Years War in North America. Early French victories and the Native's role are described, followed by a short commentary on the outcome for the Native North Americans.

This is a sample of essays produced by some of the Human Conflict group members, which are available to group members only
